(REGINA, SK) March 5, 2010 - - Does your community face challenges in meeting the latest water quality standards?

These days, increased emphasis and legislative action are being focused on drinking water quality. Mainstream's economical ozone-assisted biofiltration systems have been successfully tested over the past twenty years, and have a proven track record in municipalities across Western Canada.

Our biofiltration systems exceed the latest water quality standards by effectively removing bacteria, iron, manganese, colour, staining, odours, turbidity, dissolved organics, tannins, and much more from tough-to-treat surface and ground water.

Mainstream's systems are custom-designed to suit each customer's specific needs and conditions, and can provide from 1 m³ to 1,000 m³ of treated drinking water per day. Our systems are specifically well-suited for small communities since they are chemical-free, cost-effective, easy to operate, and are modular in design, which allows for future expansion.

Mainstream's chemical-free systems are also the "greenest" option available, featuring the highest efficiency for utilizing raw water, the lowest wastewater production, a simple gravity flow design, and low electrical consumption.

As complete water treatment project specialists, we offer our clients unique, proven, and environmentally friendly water treatment technology packages that are custom-designed for each customer. Our comprehensive project planning and execution services include planning, operational training, and long-term support.

Mainstream is pleased to announce that our Director of Research & Development, Ann Gottinger, will be speaking at the BCWWA Conference at the Small Water Systems Session on Monday May 3rd, 2010.
