Mainstream Provides Chemical-Free Ground Water Treatment

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
May 25, 2009

(Staff Writers) Many Canadians have reluctantly tolerated poor quality drinking water for many years.

However, with increased emphasis and legislative action being focused on drinking water quality, this is beginning to change. Mainstream's economical and chemical-free biofiltration systems have been successfully tested over the past fifteen years and are now being installed and operated across the prairies.

Our municipal biofiltration systems exceed the latest water quality standards and specialize in effectively removing bacteria, iron, manganese, arsenic, colour, staining, odours, turbidity, dissolved organics, tannins, and much more from tough-to-treat ground water. Our system is also effective for treating surface water.

We currently have Saskatchewan ground water systems operating in Peebles, Macoun, Echo Valley, Glen Ewen, Manor, and Aquadeo. In Manitoba, Dunrea and Kleefeld are in the process of having our system installed, with Dunrea nearly completed.

Recent advancements to our system include the introduction of filters for the effective removal of arsenic and uranium.

Finding an environmentally responsible solution is a priority for many people. Mainstream's chemical-free system is the 'greenest' option available with the highest efficiency for utilizing raw water, the lowest wastewater production, low electrical consumption (due to the simple gravity flow design), and no filters to replace.

As complete water treatment project specialists, we offer our clients the following:

- Unique, proven, and environmentally friendly water treatment technology packages that are custom designed for each customer.
- Comprehensive project planning (including assistance with infrastructure grant applications) and execution services from planning to operational training to long-term support.
